The Nature of the Firm (1937) R. H. COASE 3 from industry to industry and from firm to firm. It can, I think, be assumed that the distinguishing mark of the firm is the supersession of the price mechanism. It is, of course, as Professor Robbins points out, "related to an outside network of relative prices and costs," love of Nature, the opposition of Natural Law and Freewill are themes which seem very near to us. Only we must be careful not to interpret the past by the present. To each generation its problems present themselves in their own peculiar manner, and we must endeavour to understand Lucretius not as a contempo-confident that you understand the nature of an ordinary table. I have even heard of plain men who had the idea that they could better understand the mystery of their own nature if scientists would discover a way of explaining it in terms of the easily comprehensible nature of a table. Table No. 2 is my scientific table.

The income tax is an excise. Congress says so, the Executive says so, the Supreme Court says so. All also affirm that to be subject to the tax, or a measure of the tax, any given gain must be distinguished by connection with taxable events or activities. The income tax is NOT a tax on all that comes in.
